

Apple sawfly /Hoplocampa testudinea/

Author(s):

Date: 15.02.2014 Issue: 2/2014

The codling moth larvae are harmful. Immediately after hatching, they burrow under the fruit's skin. They mine it in the form of narrow, arched, curved tunnels. The interior of the damaged fruits blackens and emits an unpleasant smell of rot. They drop prematurely.